CIA Chief Opposes Intel Post

Rejects 9/11 panel's call for Cabinet-level intelligence czar

WASHINGTON | Rejecting a recommendation expected this week from the Sept. 11 commission, the CIA's acting director said Sunday a new national intelligence chief is unnecessary and that intelligence agencies have made changes since the 2001 attacks to better protect the country.

John McLaughlin said "a good argument can be made" for a Cabinet-level position to oversee the nation's 15 intelligence agencies and control their budgets. But, he added, "It doesn't relate particularly to the world I live in. I see the director of Central Intelligence as someone who is able to do that and is empowered to do so under the National Security Act of 1947."

McLaughlin, who took over at the CIA when Director George Tenet left on July 11, also said the agency has disrupted a number of al Qaeda plots to mount attacks by air, sea and other methods in the United States.

The CIA director now has loose authority over the country's 15 intelligence agencies. But the commission, in a preliminary report, found that the director did not hold enough power because the Pentagon controls more than 80 percent of the nation's intelligence budget. As a result, CIA requests to other agencies are often ignored.

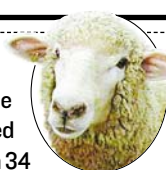

The commission's final report, expected to be released Thursday, will highlight intelligence failures by the CIA and the FBI that enabled the Sept. 11 attacks to occur.

LAW | Pulling the Wool Authorities in Romania stopped a convoy of three small pickup trucks last week after they heard the "passengers" bleating — and found that the vehicles were stuffed with sheep. Three Turkish men were transporting 94 sheep, with 34 of them crammed into a single vehicle, the Libertatea newspaper reported. Veterinary authorities in the eastern village of Rediu fined the three men $555 each for mistreating the animals and for not having the proper documents for them. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

POLITICS

Why the Long Face?

He won't be cheering, painting his face in gaudy colors or waving banners, but the Democratic Party's secret weapon is guaranteed to be the center of photographers' attention when he shows up at the party's national convention this month in Boston. People call him Swiftly. To the Democrats, he's the official donkey delegate of their 2004 national convention. Hailing from Lookout Mountain in Georgia, Swiftly was almost barred from the convention venue due to security rules. But the Kerry campaign persuaded Boston's Franklin Park Zoo to get Swiftly in. High on the Rapids

The Texas Water Safari bills itself as "The World's Toughest Canoe Race" — 260 river miles of stumps, rocks, logjams and low-hanging tree branches. The sapping summertime heat of south Texas, blasting head winds and sleep deprivation add to the challenge. Then there's the critters: Alligators, sharks and stingrays make homes along the race course. The race is so grueling that some competitors say they've had hallucinations. "I've been in a boat where all three guys saw two fishermen ahead on the riverbank, and when we got there it was just logs," said participant John Bugge, who has also conjured up dinosaurs in his mind. WAR ON DRUGS

Heroin Check

A man who returned a rental car in Langhorne, Pa., allegedly forgot to take along 88 bags of heroin he had left in the car. Employees of an Enterprise Rent-A-Car agency called police and reported finding the drugs hidden under a layer of napkins in the car's console, authorities said. Using information found in the wallet Robert Laguerre also left behind, Detective Daniel Baranoski, posing as someone who had found the heroin, set up a meeting with Laguerre at a mall. Laguerre was arrested when he arrived, police said. (AP)

CRIME

Assault With A Deadly Pet

A man in Port Orange, Fla., hit his girlfriend with a 3-foot alligator and threw beer bottles at her during an argument in the couple's mobile home, authorities said. David Havenner, 41, was ordered held without bond Saturday on misdemeanor charges of battery and possession of an alligator. Nancy Monico, 39, told investigators that Havenner beat her with his fists, then grabbed the alligator and swung it at her as she tried to escape. The alligator was turned over to Florida wildlife officials. (AP)

BAD IDEAS

Known Enemy

A man who had told police he should appear on "World's Dumbest Criminals" has been sentenced to prison for robbing a bank where he was a regular customer. Thomas Dorsey, 36, pleaded guilty Thursday to third-degree robbery. Dorsey admitted robbing a Southington, Conn., bank Jan. 20. "He didn't try to hide his identity," Dorsey's lawyer, Assistant Public Defender James Sward, said. "That shows how desperate he was." (AP)

Schwarzenegger Stands By 'Girly-Men' Remark at Rally

A spokesman for Gov. Schwarzenegger dished out the insult at a rally Saturday as he claimed Democrats were delaying the budget by catering to special interests. (AP)

Governors Eye Needs of Elderly

Leaders examine how states should aid aging baby boomers

SEATTLE | States can take the initiative in transforming the elderly experience by reshaping health care, social services and tax codes to help the rapidly growing population of those 65 and older, governors agreed Sunday at the summer meeting of the National Governors Association.

Outside the downtown hotel, hundreds of disabled protesters in wheelchairs shut down traffic, seeking support from the governors to force Medicaid to more quickly turn to home-based long-term care, rather than relying on institutions. States have had to get waivers from federal officials to pursue such programs.

The three-day gathering, which ends Monday, brought no sweeping commitments or new programs, but rather a close look at the areas where state government could step in to focus resources for the elderly.

Within eight years, the nation's 77 million baby boomers will begin turning 65, said Idaho Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, a Republican. And estimates show nearly half could be bankrupted by trying to get long-term care, he said.

Of particular concern for governors is the huge share that Medicaid eats from state budgets, and the driving force of the elderly behind the growing Medicaid program.

State officials estimate that elderly and disabled populations account for some two-thirds of the budget of Medicaid.

Several hundred people with ADAPT, a national disability rights group, rallied outside the hotel, rolling wheelchairs into intersections to stop traffic, pushing for more attention to the issue governors were discussing inside.

Wind Shift Renews Calif. Fire Threat

SANTA CLARITA, CALIF. | Strong, shifting winds Sunday surprised firefighters battling a wildfire in Southern California, forcing officials to reinstate evacuation orders they had lifted a few hours earlier.

About 150 homes in the Placerita Canyon area of northern Los Angeles County were evacuated after an unexpected wind shift brought a 3,250-acre fire closer to the area. The fire near Santa Clarita was about 35 percent contained Sunday afternoon.

More than 1,000 firefighters were battling the wildfire, which started Saturday. Its cause is under investigation.

About 40,000 acres have burned in California in the last week, from eastern San Diego County to Yosemite National Park.

Evacuation orders were lifted Sunday for about 2,000 people in Riverside County whose homes had been in the path of a wildfire, fire officials said Sunday.

The 3,219-acre fire, located some 90 miles east of Los Angeles, was started by a person shooting target practice, officials said. (AP)

Plotting a Different Protest

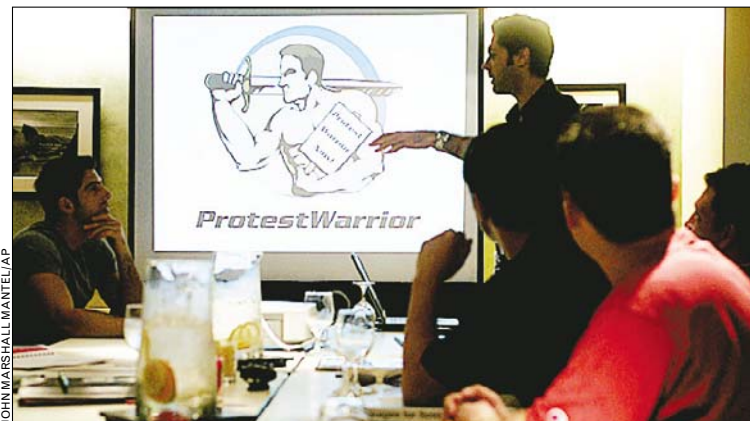

Young conservatives plan to defend GOP at Republican convention

NEW YORK | Groups planning to demonstrate against the upcoming Republican National Convention will have some unfriendly company on the asphalt and concrete outside Madison Square Garden.

Members of a new group of young Republican conservatives plan to protest the protesters.

Tom Paladino, who leads the New York chapter of ProtestWarrior, a nationwide organization, said members want to show the protesters that "there are Republicans that will protest them right back."

Added Jason Sager, a member from Brooklyn: "We are the right-wing freedom fighters. We are out there and are just as animated as the protesters can be."

COUNTER CULTURE: ProtestWarrior members meet to discuss plans to protest the protesters who are expected in New York during the Republican convention.

ProtestWarrior, which claims about 3,000 members nationwide, expects about 200 in New York for the four-day convention, which begins Aug. 30 and is expected to draw tens of thousands of opponents of President Bush.

Leaders say they know they won't have equal representation, but hope the contrast helps them stand out. They will be armed with their own picket signs and T-shirts, even video cameras to capture their mission.

This spring, the group protested anti-war rallies in several cities, including New York.

New SAT Called Less 'Coachable'

NEWTON, MASS. | The SAT is changing next year, most notably by adding a written essay, and the nearly as-popular ACT will include an optional essay.

But while the changes are designed to make the tests less "coachable" starting in spring 2005, test prep companies insist the opposite is true and that the tips and methods they've been teaching for years are even more useful now.

Plenty of parents are betting they're right, ignoring criticism that test prep companies simply prey on college admissions fears and paying for courses to prepare their rising high school juniors.

Besides the essay, the new SAT is making other changes to emphasize grammar over vocabulary and advanced math over quantitative comparisons. Kaplan and Princeton Review plan to spend, essentially, just one session on essays in their summer and fall prep courses. (AP)

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat meets with officials in his West Bank office on Sunday to discuss violence in Gaza and the resignation of his prime minister.

Palestinians Storm Gaza Security Post

Tensions rise between Arafat, militant groups

RAMALLAH, WEST BANK | Palestinian militants stormed an office of their own government in Gaza, and a third military officer resigned Sunday, as anger boiled over against Yasser Arafat's appointment of a loyalist relative from the old Palestinian guard as his security chief.

A confrontation was brewing between Arafat, reluctant to yield significant power, and Palestinian militants — and even some of his own officers — who demand deep reforms and new faces, Palestinian analysts said.

The focus of the turbulence was the appointment of Moussa Arafat as the new head of Palestinian security. Many Palestinians rejected the Palestinian leader's relative as a symbol of corruption and cronyism, propelling long-held dissatisfaction into the open.

In the Rafah refugee camp, gunmen exchanged fire with guards at preventive security headquarters and attempted to break into the complex with a bulldozer. The guards wounded three attackers, but there were no casualties to the security forces, personnel at the building said.

There also was no apparent solution to the standoff between Arafat and Palestinian prime minister Ahmed Qureia, who submitted his resignation Saturday in frustration over his inability to effect change. LARA SUKHITIAN (AP)

Alleged Deserter Of U.S. Army Seeks Treatment in Japan

TOKYO | Accused U.S. Army deserter Charles Jenkins and his family arrived Sunday in Japan, where he risks U.S. prosecution on charges he defected to North Korea in the 1960s.

Jenkins, who appeared frail as he disembarked painstakingly with the help of a cane, was immediately taken to a Tokyo hospital to be treated for abdominal problems following an operation in North Korea.

The family arrived from Jakarta, Indonesia, where they were reunited last week for the first time in about two years.

The Japanese government has pushed for U.S. clemency for the North Carolina native, who met his Japanese wife, Hitomi Soga, in North Korea after she was kidnapped from Japan in 1978 by Northern agents.

American officials have suggested they will allow him to be treated before seeking custody.

Jenkins disappeared from his Army post in 1965 when he was 24. He later appeared in North Korean anti-U.S. propaganda films. (AP)

U.S. Airstrike Kills 14 in Iraq

Interim prime minister says he approved attack on militant outposts

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | A U.S. airstrike authorized by Iraqi interim Prime Minister Iyad Allawi hit purported trenches and fighting positions in Fallujah used by al Qaeda linked foreign fighters, killing 14 people early Sunday, Iraqi officials said.

Word that Allawi approved the early morning attack was a clear attempt to show that the Iraqi government has taken full sovereignty from the Americans, despite its deep reliance on the 160,000 foreign troops, mainly from United States.

"We worked with the government, the government was fully informed about these matters, agreed with us on the need to take the action, we conducted the action," Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage said during a news conference.

"The multinational force asked Prime Minister Allawi for permission to launch strikes on some specific places where some terrorists were hiding," an official in Allawi's office said Sunday on condition of anonymity. "Allawi gave his permission."

Also Sunday, Philippine leaders said they would finish withdrawing their small contingent of troops from Iraq as early as Monday, in keeping with the demands of kidnappers holding a Filipino truck driver.

Some allies have sharply criticized the move, saying it would only encourage more kidnappings.

The nature of Sunday's target was in dispute. The U.S. military said it had destroyed positions used by fighters loyal to Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, an al Qaeda linked Jordanian militant.

Fallujah Mayor Mahmoud Ibrahim al-Jirisi said the attack hit a site for civilians supporting a local militia that provided security in the city when the Marines left.

"There are no Arabs or foreigners with them," he told the pan-Arab television station Al-Jazeera.

U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage, with Iraqi Prime Minister Iyad Allawi, said U.S. and Iraqi officials worked together to plan Sunday's strike.

Explosions from the 2 a.m. strike Sunday rocked the city. Scores of people ran to the scene and dug through the wreckage looking for survivors. RAVI NESSMAN (AP)

Critics to Challenge Casino Petitions

WASHINGTON | Opponents of a planned Northeast Washington casino plan to file a formal challenge Monday against petitions required to put the slots initiative on the Nov. 2 ballot.

Dorothy Brizill, founder of the reform group D.C. Watch, said many of the 3,869 petition sheets submitted by gambling proponents violate District of Columbia election laws.

"We have found people forging signatures. People claiming they circulated petitions and they didn't actually do it, false affidavits. It's just overwhelming," Brizill said.

Circulators are required to be city residents and only the signatures of registered District voters are valid. Entries that do not match addresses or were not dated at the time they were signed also are prime candidates for disqualification.

Brizill said she and other activists compared the more than 50,000 signatures against voter rolls. Others checked to see if circulators lived at the addresses they listed in the affidavits.

By Aug. 5, the D.C. Board of Elections and Ethics is expected to respond to the activists' challenge and determine whether the initiative has enough legitimate signatures to appear on the Nov. 2 ballot. CANDACE SMITH (AP)

In Brief

COLONIAL BEACH, VA.

Owner Seeks to Rebuild Pier Wrecked by Hurricane

Lawyers for Virginia and Maryland are debating whether a Colonial Beach landmark wrecked by Hurricane Isabel last year can be rebuilt in the Potomac River. The now-demolished pier was once the site of a Maryland off-track-betting parlor, bar, liquor store and restaurant. Owner Tom Flanagan said he had hoped to start rebuilding his Riverboat on the Potomac next month. Now it may be the end of the year before the Maryland Department of the Environment reviews his application, a department spokesman said. (AP)

GREAT FALLS, MD.

Boy, 12, Recovers From Fall

A 12-year-old boy is recovering after a hiking accident in the C&O

Canal Park. A Montgomery County Fire Department spokesman said the boy was hiking with relatives on the Billy Goat Trail near Great Falls when he slipped and fell about 15 feet down a rocky cliff.

After deciding the best way to reach the child was by water, rescue crews sent a boat out on the Potomac River to ferry the youngster to Angler's Inn, where they were met by an ambulance. The boy's injuries are not life threatening. (AP)

SINCE YOU ASKED

Q What happened to the reserved carpool parking at the Vienna Metro station? The reserved signs just disappeared. Has Metro turned anti-environment?

A Apparently, Metro is just cleaning house. The pilot program for carpoolers, which began more than a dozen years ago, was supposed to end at some point and probably be made permanent, said Metro spokeswoman Lisa Farbstein. Instead, "it just sort of hung in there, under everybody's radar screen," she said.

Metro finally ended the marathon experiment when other parking changes took effect June 25.

The program was being tested at parking lots at the Huntington, New Carrollton, Shady Grove and Vienna stations, said Farbstein. It was supposed to supply a limited number of choice parking spots to carpoolers, as well as a dollar discount on parking fees.

Metro parking officials are working on a new program for carpoolers, though a plan isn't expected to be proposed for several months, she said.

"Obviously, carpoolers are something that we encourage," she said. "There will be some kind of carpool program How it will be structured remains to be seen."

After a March 18 fire, Metro riders had to walk to work. The transit agency is currently installing cables that will alert Metro to potential fire hazards in the system.

Metro Installing 'Smart' Cables

Transit agency hopes new electrical lines will eliminate fires

WASHINGTON | Seeking an end to the smoke and fire that have occasionally halted service and flushed riders from the subway, Metro is replacing the high-voltage lines that feed power to the third rail with new "smart" cables that officials hope will warn of potential problems.

The project calls for the replacement of about 167 miles of cable over eight years. Twenty-three miles have been completed since work began last year, said Fred Goodine, Metro's assistant general manager for safety and risk protection.

"It's not sexy," like opening a new station or buying rail cars, he said. "But it's vital."

The new cables will send a signal alerting Metro to specific points where the insulation is significantly worn, possibly eliminating the chance of future cable fires, said Goodine.

Age and exposure to weather and water can erode insulation that protects copper inside the cables.

The number of incidents has fallen in recent years due in part to efforts to keep tracks clear of debris, which can easily catch fire, Goodine said.

But cables have been at the root of far more serious situations, such as a March 18 fire that dumped thousands of Red Line riders street-side and disrupted service for hours during the morning commute. In April 2000, an evening rush hour cable fire on the Blue and Orange lines stranded a train and forced the evacuation of two stations.

"We're at a critical point," Goodine said of the 28-year-old transit system. "[The] infrastructure really is begging for attention."

I'm getting married in about six weeks. I haven't told many coworkers about it, but I'm taking two weeks off and someone is bound to ask me what's up. Here's the issue: It's a lesbian wedding. How do I answer?

My feeling is, it's your life. If someone at work asks, you tell them what you'd tell anyone. You're getting married. I've heard from several people in your situation. They were very wary about explaining things, but when they told co-workers about their marriages, they were bombarded with questions that usually started with: "What did you wear?" and "Can you bring in pictures?"

TRAINING | The same Chicago comedy troupe that gave us John Belushi, Bill Murray and Mike Myers is trying to get Fortune 500 companies to lighten up.

Mixing improv with more traditional corporate training methods, Second City Communications — the consulting arm of the famous improvisational group — works to polish business-people's skills.

One recent afternoon, employees of Motorola Inc. yukked it up in the interest of better business. Egged on by an instructor, the sales and account executives struck humorous poses, acted out unseemly business traits, clasped palms to form a wedding tunnel and flopped on the floor.

Under President Tom Yorton, who hired Second City when he was a marketing executive at 3Com Corp. and then joined it 2½ years ago, the company has been branching out more beyond corporate comedy routines and trying harder to tap into the training

Regular customers include Major League Baseball, where Second City conducts an annual bilingual workshop on such issues as cultural assimilation, dealing with the media and financial matters. One skit was about a battle of boom boxes in a locker room; another about excuses a ballplayer makes when he can't make it home for his daughter's dance recital.

Improv is a particularly effective training method, said Yorton, because business itself is an act of improvisation. DAVE CARPENTER (AP)

For Hamilton, Open and Shut Case

American outlasts Els in British Open playoff

GOLF | Unflappable to the very end, Todd Hamilton tapped in a par putt to win the British Open in a playoff, bending over to get the ball out of the hole as if it were just another round of golf.

Then he stopped.

And only then did the enormity of the moment — and how he got there — start to sink in.

Twelve years toiling in the most obscure outposts in golf. Eight tries at PGA Tour school before reaching the big leagues as a 38-year-old father of three.

Now, British Open champion.

Turning his back on the hole, he let out a whoop, raised both arms in the air and hugged his caddie.

"I hoped that something like this would happen," Hamilton said.

Tough times only hardened his resolve on the back nine of Royal Troon, where Hamilton overcame Phil Mickelson and outlasted Ernie Els in a four-hole playoff Sunday to capture the silver claret jug.

Hamilton made four pars in the playoff, the last one the toughest of them all.

From 40 yards short of the hole, he used a utility club to bump the ball along the crusty grass until it stopped 2 feet from the cup.

Els had a 12-foot birdie putt in regulation to win. His last chance was a 15-foot birdie putt from the same line to keep the playoff going, but it turned away to the left.

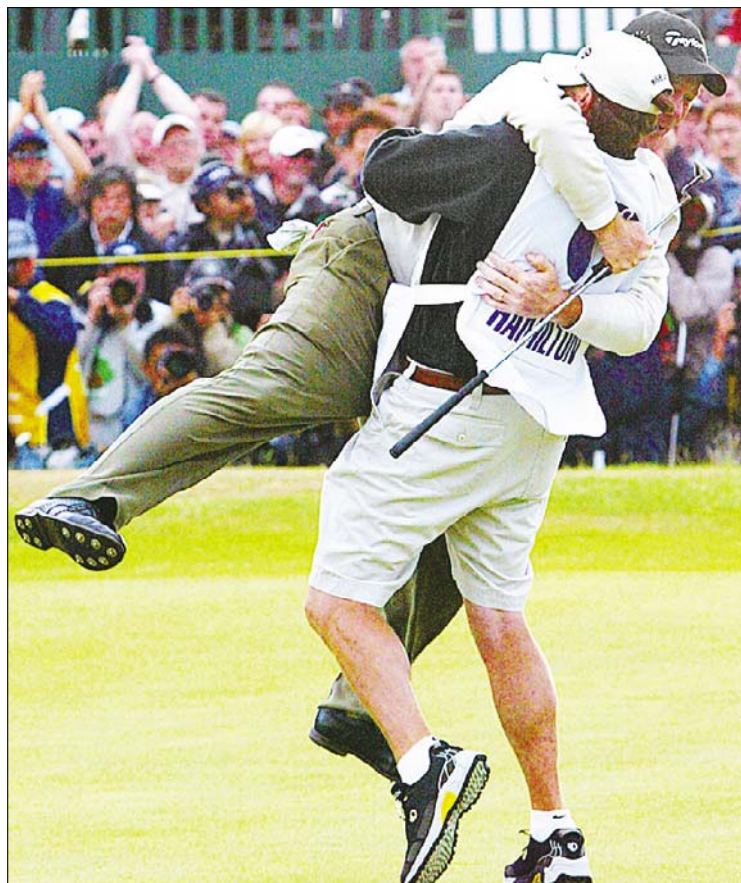

For the second year in a row, the jug went to a player no one could have imagined at the start of the week.

But unlike Ben Curtis, who was ranked 396th when he won at Royal St. George's in his first major, no one will ever call Hamilton a fluke.

Not after he beat back a leaderboard loaded with majors champions.

Not after he refused to get flustered when Mickelson took the lead with eight holes to play.

And certainly not after going toe-to-toe with Els in a pressure-packed playoff. DOUG FERGUSON (AP)

U.S. Relay Team May Lose Gold

IAAF recommends punishment based on Young's doping case

DOPING | Track and field's governing body recommended Sunday that the U.S. 1,600-meter relay team, led by Michael Johnson, be stripped of its gold medal from the Sydney Olympics as part of the Jerome Young doping case.

The International Olympic Committee is expected to endorse the recommendation by the International Association of Athletics Federations, probably before next month's Athens Olympics.

The recommendation came 2 1/2 weeks after the Swiss-based Court of Arbitration for Sport ruled that Young, the 400 world champion who ran in the relay's opening and semifinal rounds, should be stripped of his gold because of a positive doping test for the steroid nandrolone on June 26, 1999.

Young, who has denied taking a prohibited substance, was exonerated by a USATF doping appeals board on July 10, 2000.

Webb Can Book Trip To Athens

TRACK | Virginian Alan Webb had a far easier time Sunday than he can expect at the Athens Games, where he will try to end a 36-year U.S. Olympic medal drought in the men's 1,500 meters this summer.

Webb pulled away from the field to win by more than two seconds at the U.S. Olympic trials. But his time of 3 minutes, 36.13 seconds was just the 86th fastest in the world this year — and only the fourth best for Webb this season.

Webb, 21, was the latest youngster to make the U.S. Olympic team. But several veterans also triumphed Sunday, including 33-year-old Stacy Dragila and 37-year-old Gail Devers.

Dragila, the defending Olympic champion, won the women's pole vault but failed in three attempts to break the world record. She missed at 16 feet, 1/2-inch, which would have topped Svetlana Feofanova's mark of 16 feet set earlier this month.

Devers became just the third U.S. track and field athlete — joining Carl Lewis and Willye White — to make her fifth Olympic team, winning the 100-meter hurdles by less than the length of her trademark fingernails.

Devers, who won her 10th national title, edged Joanna Hayes in a photo finish. Devers was timed in 12.547 seconds and Hayes in 12.549. ROB GLOSTER (AP)

WHO KNEW? Moira Dunn had never won on the LPGA Tour until she birdied the 16th and 17th holes to win the Giant Eagle LPGA Classic Sunday. It was her 245th pro tournament. (AP)

From Retirement to Olympics for Hatch

GYMNASTICS | Eight years after she retired, Annia Hatch is going to the Olympics.

The 26-year-old Cuban native was one of six gymnasts selected for the U.S. team for the Athens Olympics on Sunday night, the latest chapter in an already inspiring story. Mohini Bhardwaj also made the team, as did Terin Humphrey, part of last summer's gold medal-winning world championships team.

Joining them will be co-national champions Courtney Kupets and Carly Patterson, and Courtney McCool. Kupets and McCool's spots had been all but assured after their one-two finish at the Olympic trials, and they needed only to show "readiness" at this week's camp. (AP)

Tampa's Hendrickson tosses complete-game victory over Baltimore

BASEBALL | Mark Hendrickson's start was pushed back two days because of a stiff neck. It turned out to be the right move.

Hendrickson pitched a four-hitter for his second career complete game, Carl Crawford hit a two-run triple during a five-run sixth inning and the Tampa Bay Devil Rays beat the Baltimore Orioles 7-2 Sunday.

Hendrickson (7-7) struck out six and walked one in Tampa Bay's first complete game since Victor Zambrano beat Oakland 11-2 on Sept. 7, 2003. The former NBA player retired his first 12 batters before Javy Lopez opened the fifth with a ground-rule double to right.

Baltimore Orioles second baseman Brian Roberts falls on top of Tampa Bay Devil Rays' Rocco Baldelli after forcing him at second base in Sunday's game.

The Orioles (39-50) are now 9-21 when the opponent starts a left-hander.

"We've been hitting extra," Orioles manager Lee Mazzilli said. "You've got to do it in the game."

Melvin Mora homered for Baltimore in his return from the 15-day disabled list. Dave Borkowski (1-1) allowed four runs and six hits over five-plus innings in his second start for the Orioles. (AP)

Tigers Drop Yanks, Pass Last Year's Win Total

BASEBALL | One year after being the butt of jokes for their futility, it's tough to make fun of the Detroit Tigers.

The Tigers surpassed their 2003 wins total — with 2 1/2 months left in the season — beating the New York Yankees 4-2 on Sunday behind Nate Robertson's pitching and Carlos Pena's hitting.

Detroit (44-47) set an AL record for losses last year by going 43-119. The Tigers easily set a record for fewest games needed to surpass their wins total from the previous year, according to the Elias Sports Bureau. The previous mark of 106 was set by the 1962 Phillies and the 1989 Orioles. (AP)

BASEBALL | Roger Clemens was briefly reminded of better times this season, when the Houston Astros were rolling and the post-season seemed a certainty.

The Rocket won his first game in three weeks and the Astros tied a season high with three homers in a 5-3 victory over the San Diego Padres on Sunday, stopping a four-game losing streak and giving interim skipper Phil Garner his first win as Houston's manager since he took over this week. (AP)

Armstrong Holds Back After Cutting Into Lead

Five-time champion remains 22 seconds behind leader Voeckler

CYCLING | There's a giant obstacle — the Alps — in Lance Armstrong's road to victory at the Tour de France.

But judging by his devastating form, this week's peaks may be nothing more than speed bumps as the five-time champion closes in on a record sixth straight crown in Paris next week.

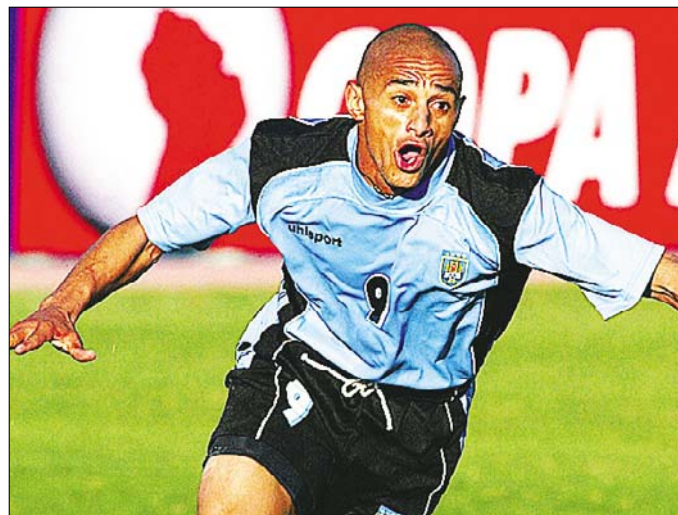

After two torrid days in the Pyrenees, where the 32-year-old Texan demolished rivals and killed doubts that he is past his prime, he and other top riders caught their breath Sunday, letting Aitor Gonzalez of Spain take victory in the flat 14th stage.

Monday is a rest day — a last chance to regroup, treat injuries and prepare physically and mentally for three days in the Alps.

Armstrong could take the lead as early as Tuesday, on the first 112-mile Alpine stage from Valreas to Villard-de-Lans. This weekend, he cut Thomas Voeckler's overall lead from more than nine minutes to just 22 seconds. JOHN LEICESTER (AP)

MOVING ON: Dario Silva celebrates after scoring one of his two goals in Uruguay's 3-1 win over Paraguay during a quarterfinal match of Copa America on Sunday. Uruguay moves into the tournament's semifinals.

Earnhardt Burned While Practicing For Le Mans Race

AUTO RACING | A fun weekend of racing for Dale Earnhardt Jr. turned frightening Sunday when a wreck during a warmup for an American Le Mans Series race turned his car into a fireball, leaving him hospitalized with burns on his face and legs.

Earnhardt's injuries were "moderate-sized burns of moderate intensity," according to medical officials at Infineon Raceway in Sonoma, Calif.

The NASCAR star was to have driven in Sunday's ALMS race with veteran road racing driver Boris Said. The team withdrew from the race. (AP)

TRENDS | Actor John Cho is packing his suitcase for another whirlwind trip to promote "Harold & Kumar Go To White Castle." The 32-year-old actor ("Road Trip," "Better Luck Tomorrow") co-stars with Kal Penn in a comedy about two likeable stoners whose quest for munchie-subduing burgers leads to a wild comic ride.

Cho explains his own journey that led to the role of Harold.

How did you hear about the movie?

The writer came up to me at a screening and said, "Check this out. I have a movie with you in mind." He was white and I thought, this doesn't happen very often — that a white guy has written a movie with an Asian guy in mind. In fact, he wrote a very beautiful Asian-American character. When I read it, that was what I really responded to. And, of course, the laughs.

Was it surprising to be offered the lead in this movie?

Absolutely! I couldn't believe it was getting made. When I first read it, I was like, "Good luck man!" In fact, they sold it very quickly. There seems to be a lot of good will surrounding the project.

DUDE, WHERE'S MY SNACK? Penn, left, and Cho on a quixotic quest for "sliders."

"I want to hit all the genres. I'd love to be a cowboy! An astronaut. Or even do a martial arts movie if it came down to it."

"HAROLD & KUMAR GO TO WHITE CASTLE" STAR JOHN CHO

Do you think the movie reinforces stereotypes about minorities or breaks them down?

What it does is it brings them up then murders them. It's like skeet shooting. Some of the stereotypes are funny, too, because I feel like some Asians bring stereotypes to the movie in their own head.

What would be your ultimate role?

I want to hit all the genres. I'd love to be a cowboy! [Laughs] An astronaut. Or even do a martial arts movie if it came down to it. First off the bat, I'd like to do a romantic comedy.

When was the first time you tried a White Castle?

The first time I had one was a "Better Luck Tomorrow" tour in Chicago where someone brought in some White Castles in a bar. I said, "What the hell are these things?" "This is what we have at the bar at 2 a.m."

L.A.'s Tommy's or White Castle?

I'll go with Tommy, because Tommy's is my White Castle. I had it growing up and there's a lot more meat. Actually, that's the charm of White Castle — the smallness. PETERSON GONZAGA (ENTERTAINMENT NEWS WIRE)

The Hives Ready to Break Out

Sweden's hottest garage rockers cool things down too much

MUSIC | One reason The Hives were such a refreshing arrival here two years ago was that they came with a secret weapon: a smile.

From the Swedish quintet's snappy wardrobe and self-congratulatory stage patter to its hyperactive mix of punk and garage rock, The Hives seemed not only smart but blessed with a limitless imagination.

"Tyrannosaurus Hives" (Interscope), the band's first album since moving to a major label, shifts the musical shades (the influences are more aligned with '70s new wave in places), but the pace is just as frantic.

"Abra Cadaver" is a sonic tornado built around the Hives' signature theme of resisting conformity. "Tried to stick an office worker inside of me/But I kept breaking free," Almqvist declares. It's so full of energy and promise that it defies you not to be enthralled.

"Two-Timing Touch and Broken Bones" keeps things moving at a breakneck pace, but it's "Walk Idiot Walk" that should make alt-rock radio airways hum this summer. A deliriously upbeat attack on anyone who tries to stifle individuality, the track salutes the mocking, mechanical rhythms of Devo and the swagger and force of the Who.

IT'S NOT ALL BLACK AND WHITE: The Hives can't match the verve of their debut.

But things start slipping. While the energy never fails, the themes and melodies feel commonplace at times. Instead of putting a Hives stamp on their influences, the band seems to be leaning on models, including The Clash, Screamin'

Jay Hawkins and even The Strokes. ROBERT HILBURN (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

The Hives will headline a sold-out show at the 9:30 Club, Tues., July 20, with Sahara Hotnights and Reigning Sound; 815 V St. NW; 202-265-0930. (U St.-Cardozo)

New Newspeak

McSweeney's offers a satirical reference for the modern word

COINAGE | If you've never dropped the word "dubyavirus" into casual conversation, urged that an official be "ashcrofted" or commented upon "The Cheney Effect," then you haven't seen the future, according to McSweeney's.

Coming in August from the publishing house founded by author-activist Dave Eggers is "The Future Dictionary of America."

Contributors include Eggers, Stephen King, Kurt Vonnegut, Jonathan Franzen, Wendy Wasserstein and more than 100 others. Proceeds will be donated to "groups working for the public good in the 2004 election."

The McSweeney's dictionary includes new words such as "dubyavirus" and old words such as "environment" with new definitions. Most of the entries are political. Some are philosophical, some

Author T.C. Boyle offers several definitions of "environment," including "a conceptual space, like the air-space over Iraq, which will create a sucking void if not filled to repleteness with high explosives."

Under the entry "dubyavirus," fiction writer Thisbe Nissen imagines that Bush has been indicted as a war criminal, thus ending "an aggressively invasive and tragically widespread disease."

Novelist Jeffrey Eugenides invokes the "Cheney Effect," reserved for "the manifestation of personality changes brought on by the reception of a transplanted organ, usually the heart."

Attorney General John Ashcroft inspired novelist Robert Coover to coin "ashcrofted," when one is "removed from or disqualified for public office on grounds of religious delusions." Stephen King contributes "slouge," his term for the endless political opining on cable television.

Some liberals, too, receive entries. Cartoonist Art Spiegelman contributes "ralphnadir." It is "the lowest point in any process," so low that the process must be changed.

COVERAGE | Contrary to his broadcast competitors, PBS' Jim Lehrer will be on the air for three prime-time hours each night of next week's Democratic convention from Boston. He'll do the same thing with the Republicans in a month.

TV viewers who want to follow the conventions this summer will have plenty of choices — perhaps more than ever before. C-SPAN, CNN, Fox News Channel and MSNBC all plan extensive, even gavel-to-gavel coverage.

The biggest broadcast networks, however, are continuing their long-running reduction of live coverage. ABC, CBS and NBC will be on the air live for three hours for each convention; that's the same as in 2000 for CBS and NBC, and four hours less for ABC.

CBS' Dan Rather, who has covered or anchored every national convention since 1964, said he used to be a proponent of full-time coverage. "But that was at a time when something really happened there, actual people were nominated, and the nominations weren't sewn up until we got there," Rather said.

Yet Pat Buchanan's angry speech in 1992 made news, said George Stephanopoulos, host of ABC News' "This Week." Add to that, "In 1988, when ... George Herbert Walker Bush said, 'Read my lips, no new taxes,' he pretty much won the 1988 campaign and lost the 1992 campaign with one single speech."

Lehrer said the broadcasters can't justify their decision journalistically.

"When they say to the American people that these conventions are not important enough to cover, they become, in my opinion, part of the message of the conventions themselves." DAVID BAUDER (AP)

Superheroes at War

LAWSUITS | Marvel Enterprises Inc., creators of such comic book superheroes as "Spider-Man" and "The Incredible Hulk," is suing The Walt Disney Co. in a royalty dispute over animation programs aired on Disney's ABC Family channel.

Marvel is asking for nearly $55 million in compensatory damages, interest and other fees it says it is owed for royalties generated by made-for-television episodes of "Spider-Man," "X-Men" and "The Incredible Hulk."

The agreements at issue in the lawsuit, filed last week in Los Angeles County Superior Court, were made before Disney acquired Fox Family Worldwide in 2001. The lawsuit claims Disney has not kept accurate records of royalties due under those inherited agreements.

Disney spokesman John Spelich said the company had not yet seen the lawsuit and could not comment.

Episodes of all three shows were made in the late 1990s and Disney inherited the right to air them and sell the shows on home video and into foreign markets, the lawsuit claims.

Marvel claims it is owed millions of dollars in royalties, including from the licensing of music associated with the shows.

It also claims Disney failed to aggressively market the shows, especially in light of the popularity the three titles have gained from the successful theatrical movies made by other studios.

"Indeed, although Disney is the heir to these important rights, it has treated these profitable properties as second rate," the lawsuit states.

The lawsuit, which claims $54.8 million in total damages, does acknowledge that Disney did pay some disputed royalties when asked. GARY GENTILE (AP)

Messing Around

This season's twist on 'Will & Grace'? Grace will actually be in it

SLIM PICKINGS | When "Will & Grace" returns for its seventh season on NBC this fall, it will be marked by at least one strong new element: the return of Grace.

After a pregnancy that kept her growing belly hidden from cameras, and then gone from several episodes of the show, Debra Messing will be back as Grace.

When she was in the series, she had to use increasingly elaborate devices to camouflage her growing belly, including a potted plant that made her look, co-star Eric McCormack said, "like Artie Johnson delivering the line."

Now that she's back, new situations are planned for her — especially as her doomed-from-the-start marriage to Harry Connick Jr.'s Leo ends.

There are plans for the supporting characters as well, said Executive Producer Alex Herschlag, including a job at a gay network for fan favorite Jack (Sean Hayes) and possibly a romantic rivalry between Grace and Karen (Megan Mullaly).

CRAZY-COOL CINEMA

THE GRID (9 p.m., TNT) This joint TNT-

JAN THUST/TNT

The only thing standing between us and terror is a guy named Canary (McDermott).

BBC production stars Dylan McDermott ("The Practice") and Julianna Margulies ("ER"). He's Max Canary, a hotheaded FBI agent with personal scores to settle from 9/11. She's Marne Jackson, the National Security Council's counterterrorism chief coordinating the efforts of the FBI, CIA and Britain's intelligence agencies.

This two-hour episode introduces a sprawling cast of lesser American agents, British spy chiefs, Arab terrorists and their flunkies. Almost every character takes a bow with a little speech, which gets old pretty quickly, particularly since they all are given to dead-earnest pontificating about terror, justice, Islam or all of the above. THEATER REVIEW

Accept No Imitations, Says Former Peter Pan

SANDY DUNCAN, 58, is fed up with show business, according to an interview published Sunday in the St. Paul Pioneer Press. Audiences are being cheated by touring productions that claim to be Broadway musicals but are pale imitations. "A lot of what's coming out of New York is dreck; they should be touring them in theme parks," Duncan said, adding that "it's immoral, and it tricks the public." She is on a six-month tour of "The King and I." (AP)

Mayor to Larry Flynt: Don't Wait by the Phone

In a rare betrayal of his age, LARRY FLYNT, 61, has expanded his pornography empire to Florida. His latest upscale sex shop, Hustler Hollywood, opened in Fort Lauderdale Friday, despite opposition from Mayor Jim Naugle. Flynt is scheduled to visit the new store on Aug. 3, but Naugle won't be rolling out the red carpet for his arrival. "If he sends me an invitation where I have to call and RSVP, his phone is not going to ring," he said. (AP)

Oh, Thank You, Master!

SHERYL CROW feels lucky to be permitted to follow boyfriend LANCE ARMSTRONG on the Tour de France. In his autobiography, written before he met the singer, Armstrong said that bike races aren't "an environment for wives and girlfriends." "I have to say I think it's amazing that Lance has included me because it's a very male sport," Crow said. "The women don't come out. It's really kind and generous to include me in all this." (AP)

EXHIBITIONS

Never Mind the Bloodspots

Gory artifacts from New York's Chelsea Hotel, where SID VICIOUS stabbed and killed Nancy Spungen in 1978, will be displayed for the first time at an upcoming art exhibition in London, the Independent reported Sunday. Items to be showcased include a blood-splattered album poster and other gruesome artifacts to whet the public appetite for sex, drugs, rock 'n' roll and second-degree murder. (EXPRESS)

One Last Call for Smith

ELLIOTT SMITH's final album, "from a basement on the hill," will be released a year after his death, his estate announced Saturday. The album cover shows Smith sitting on a set of brick steps. Pulled together from three years of studio work, the album is largely comprised of material never released. It features 15 tracks and comes out on Oct. 19 from independent label Anti-Records. (AP)

Spears Caught Swilling 'Seng

BRITNEY SPEARS is threatening to sue the New York Post unless the paper "immediately issues an appropriate retraction, apology and financial settlement" for running a "totally fabricated, fictional and defamatory" front-page story, her lawyer said Friday. The paper labeled the singer "Boozier Britney" alongside a photo of her in a convenience store, chugging from a small, dark bottle. However, Spears and the store's clerk insisted she was actually drinking ginseng extract. (EXPRESS)

TO THE EDITOR

I AM ABSOLUTELY disgusted by the article "Bigger, Brighter Signs Coming to Rail Stations" (July 16). After two consecutive years of fare hikes and a new measure forcing tourists to buy $5 SmartTrip passes to pay for parking, this is the best idea the Metro system can come up with for that money? Bigger and brighter signs? As another reader mentioned, what about buses and trains with insufficient air conditioning? What about working escalators and elevators in the stations, or ensuring ceilings won't come crumbling down on riders? Make the system worth dishing out $11.30 a day to get to and from work. Spending $1.5 million per station for new signs? Give me a break, Metro.

WHILE THERE WERE some pleasant surprises among this year's Emmy nominations ("Emmys' Facelift," July 16), some of the best shows are still being ignored. "Scrubs," "Gilmore Girls" and even the freshman breakout hit "The O.C." were all robbed. And as usual, the now dearly departed "Angel" received no nods. It's just a crime.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Work with imaginary forces and you'll arrive at an idea that may well send you off in a new and highly successful direction.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You're being a little too fickle; it's time to accept a little more of that which rubs you the wrong way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Your focus must become sharper and more specific; though you understand the big picture, you may be missing some of the details.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Control your ego, or you're sure to bring upon yourself a little too much criticism of the wrong sort. Try to make friends.

Stewart Trial

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

Criminal defense lawyer JERALYN MERRITT was online Friday to discuss Martha Stewart's sentence: five months in prison, five months of home confinement, a $30,000 fine and probation for two years.

In light of Stewart's completely defiant and unapologetic remarks, can the judge do anything to change her lenient sentence and decision to allow Stewart to remain free pending appeal?

The judge cannot change her sentence. Martha's remarks should not affect the judge's decision on whether she should receive an appeal bond — remorse is not a factor in deciding whether an appeal bond should be granted. Nor is it a factor in determining whether a defendant should be granted a voluntary surrender.

Is this not another case of a celebrity getting a light sentence?

I don't think Martha got a light sentence. She got the least possible under the guidelines, but I think there are a lot of questions about whether Joan Q. Public, in her shoes, would even have been prosecuted.

Will she spend time in a cell?

If she goes to a minimum security federal prison camp, like Danbury, she won't be in a cell. It's more like a dorm or barracks. No bars. But it's not a walk in the park, either. She will definitely feel her loss of freedom.

What's the lesson to be learned in Martha Stewart's conviction?

If you learn you are the subject of a federal probe — white collar or otherwise — the best advice is keep your mouth shut and don't think you can talk yourself out of it. The jails are filled with people who thought if they only could tell their side of the story, the police and investigators would see it their way.
